$Ka-Ching! Get paid to grocery-shop!

Saving at the supermarket is great, but what if you could actually get paid to go to the grocery store? You can—and you don't even have to change your shopping list to cash in! Tracie Fobes of PennyPinchinMom.com gives the scoop on her top three ways to earn extra dough:

✓ CHECKOUT51

Here's how it works: Every Thursday, Checkout51 releases about 10 to 12 offers on everything from cereal and crackers to cleaning and beauty products, which are good for seven days. You simply buy the item, submit a photo of your receipt, and Checkout 51 will deposit money in your account, which you can receive by check or through PayPal once it reaches $20. The best part? "You can go to any store," says Fobes. "That's what I love about it!"

Get started! Go to Checkout51.com to sign up via Facebook or e-mail.

✓ IBOTTA

Unlike Checkout51, iBotta's rebates are store-specific, so you'll have to shop at Walmart,

Target, CVS and so on to earn. That said, they have tons more offers and even more ways to make money (you'll collect it via PayPal or Venmo). For instance, instead of simply getting paid for buying a particular product (you take a photo of your receipt, just like with Checkout51), you can earn a quarter if you watch a video or take a poll plus another 50 cents if you share it with friends on Facebook. Says Fobes: "You can get $1 back on a gallon of milk—and that's huge for parents because milk is so expensive these days!"

Get started! You can download the free app from the Apple App Store, find it on Google Play for Androids or go to iBotta.com.

✓ SAVINGSTAR

Open a SavingStar account, and you'll have a chance to link eCoupons to your grocery loyalty cards (you'll get an e-mail alert whenever new deals on everyday items like paper towels, juice and diapers come up). Then when you use your loyalty card at the checkout, the money automatically goes straight into your SavingStar account. Once you've accumulated $5 in savings, it'll be transferred via PayPal or you can opt for an Amazon gift card!

Get started! Log on to SavingStar.com, where you can sign up with Facebook or by e-mail. Tip! Earn rewards with Nielson Homescan! Apply to be on their consumer panel at Homescan.com. They'll send you a handheld scanner to track your weekly purchases, including groceries. In exchange, you'll rack up points good for gift cards and more!
